Underlying Manager Performance

The chart displays the cumulative return (%) of 10 underlying managers from January 2023 to July 2025. The y-axis represents the cumulative return percentage, ranging from 0 to 100. The x-axis shows time in months, with labels for Jan 2023, Jul 2023, Jan 2024, Jul 2024, Jan 2025, and Jul 2025. The chart shows that the purple line (representing the 10th manager) has the highest cumulative return, reaching approximately 100% by July 2025. The other managers show lower, more volatile returns, with the blue line (representing the 1st manager) showing the lowest return, ending around 40%.

Market Update

Australian equities edged higher in October, with the S&P/ASX 200 Index gaining 0.4 per cent, underperforming global peers as the domestic unemployment rate rose to a four-year high.

Materials and Energy sectors led the gains, both rising around 4 per cent, while Information Technology and Consumer Discretionary sectors fell sharply by 8 per cent and 7 per cent, respectively.

Small caps continued to outperform, with the S&P/ASX Small Ordinaries Index rising 2 per cent in the month and 25 per cent year-to-date, highlighting a strong risk-on rotation into mid and small-cap names.

China underperformed regional peers, as investor sentiment remained cautious despite the highly anticipated meeting between US and China.

U.S. equities rose, with the S&P 500 Index gaining 2.3 per cent in October on strong earnings from large-cap technology companies and optimism around trade developments.

Sector rotation favoured risk, led by Information Technology up 6.2 per cent, while Financials and Materials lagged with declines of 2.8 per cent and 5.0 per cent respectively.

Equity market leadership remained narrow, with the S&P 500 Top 50 Index up over 4 per cent, while small and mid-cap benchmarks both declined.

European equities outperformed, with European equities rising 2.7 per cent, driven by broad-based gains across the continent; Utilities and Information Technology led sector performance, both up 7 per cent.

Bond markets rallied globally, supported by a 25 basis point rate cut by the U.S. Federal Reserve

Australian and New Zealand fixed income also strengthened, with the Composite IG Bond Index rising 1 per cent after the RBNZ lowered its official cash rate to 2.5 per cent.

Commodities continued their upward momentum, led by Copper up 6.8 per cent and Gold gaining 4 per cent in October, extending gold's year-to-date rally beyond 50 per cent.
